Reclaiming our leading edge; a renewed drive for innovation and improvement for student success

An annual report customarily focuses on tallying the successes and statistics of the prior year, and at Coastline Community College we are proud to share those facts and numbers with you in this special annual report edition of the Coastliner. However, in this issue, I also want to focus on the future.

Our famous Orange County neighbor Walt Disney once said, "We keep moving forward, opening new doors, and doing new things, because we're curious and curiosity keeps leading us down new paths." But, those words aren't reserved exclusively for magic-making within a nearby theme park. They also ring true for our team of educational "dreamers" here at Coastline as we continually seek to improve the educational experience. By bravely implementing new technologies, programs, and processes, we're furthering our 37-year history as a "curious" and courageous trendsetter among community colleges. It's part of our DNA, and this year (2013-2014) we will be focused on embracing it more than ever as we charge forward under the theme "Reclaiming our leading edge; a renewed drive for innovation and improvement for student success."

I announced this theme at the fall 2013 All-College Meeting held on our beautiful new campus in Newport Beach in September. This meeting was attended by nearly all Coastline faculty and staff members, and allowed us to come together for collective planning at the start of the fall term. It was during this planning session—as I witnessed fiery conversations from around the room—that I really took note of the common DNA of a Coastliner. Whether they are founding faculty members or newly hired instructors; staff members with one year under their belt or 20 years of experience, one thing is apparent: we all share this infectious passion for finding new and better ways to serve students and facilitate student success.

We were well known for this passion when we first opened our doors in 1976. In fact, Coastline had the largest opening day enrollment (nearly 20,000 students) on record of any community, ever, a record that still stands today. As we made our mark providing education within the community and through early distance learning methods such as telecourses and correspondence courses, we became known nationwide as the innovative "college without walls." A college that could provide education without a traditional campus was truly innovative back then, and it still is today.

Today, although we have three state-of-the-art mini-campuses within the Coast Community College District (located in Garden Grove, Newport Beach, and Westminster), we really are identified by our fourth campus: the Coastline virtual campus. Growing this campus doesn't require pouring new foundations or erecting new walls. Growing our virtual campus requires passion, energy, and innovative solutions for tomorrow's teachers and learners. Fostering that passion and energy and channeling it into new and innovative projects is our number one priority this year, and I look forward to reporting back to you next fall with a list of projects we've initiated and completed under this charge.

Of course we move forward remembering the college's overall Vision and Mission. Our vision statement "Creating opportunities for student success" is our main purpose and central to all we do. Our mission statement defines what we do and what makes us different than others: "Coastline Community College promotes academic excellence and student success for today's global students through accessible, flexible, innovative education that leads to the attainment of associate degrees, transfers, certificates, basic skills readiness for college, and career and technical education."

As we embark on this new fiscal year, new school year, and newly invigorated mission for innovation and improvement, I hope you will join us as a student, supporter, or spokesperson and advocate within the community. Help us spread the word about Coastline. We're doing great things here, and we will continue to do great things for our students and the community we serve.

Warmest Regards,

Loretta P. Adrian, Ph.D.
President

A message from the Coastline Foundation

Dear Coastline neighbors, partners, students, and supporters:

The fall/winter issue of the Coastliner community newsletter is always my favorite. Not only does it highlight successes of the past fiscal year, but it also serves as an open invitation for you to get involved—with the college and the Coastline Foundation—during the current and coming year. This is an extremely important invitation and I hope you will feel compelled to “RSVP.”

The Coastline Foundation relies upon gifts of time, talent, and of course monetary donations, in order to improve access to quality instruction and career training right here in Orange County. Our work raises funds for scholarships, program innovation, technology improvements, and endowments that will provide a stable funding source for the college (despite any State budget crisis) for years to come. Join us and make a difference in your local community. Call the Foundation today at (714) 241-6154.

Sincerely,
Jeff Morin

Attorney, Ken Duong, reflects on his commitment to education

Ken D. Duong, Esq. was born in Vietnam and came to the United States (via the Philippines and Malaysia) as a refugee in 1986. Today, he is an accomplished attorney representing clients in corporate law, international business, and taxation matters through his company, TDL International Law Firm, APLC, which has offices in both Fountain Valley and Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam.

“Education has been an important and integral part of my life,” he confirmed. “Without the opportunity in education, I would not be where I am today,” he attests.

Although he has already had an impressive academic career—with an undergrad degree from UCLA and J.D. and M.B.A. degrees from Golden Gate University—Ken says he is still committed to learning more and discovering new ways to apply what he has formally learned. “Everyday I continue to learn more both academically and practically, which keeps me sharp, intelligent, and connected to the community,” he said.

His commitment to education is beyond personal. Ken linked up with the Coastline Community College Foundation because “I truly value education as the key to all success.” His work on the Coastline Foundation Board of Directors turns this message into a working testament as he helps to plan and implement growth and fundraising efforts that support scholarships and program improvements.

Ken’s firm has also seen the benefits of this partnership. “The partnership has exposed me to many high-level professionals, philanthropists, and educators,” he says. “Also, our law firm has been given the opportunity to sponsor events, host events, and give back to the Orange County community.”

If you would also like to show your support for education through a mutually beneficial partnership with the Coastline Foundation, call (714) 241-6154 or e-mail your inquiry to foundation@coastline.edu.

Coastline again named a “Top Military-Friendly College”

Military Advanced Education (MAE) included Coastline Community College in its recently released “2014 Guide to Military-Friendly Colleges and Universities.”

The guide provides potential students with information about colleges and universities that implement best practices in support of men and women in uniform. Institutions were evaluated based on a number of attributes, including: the flexibility of online learning options, the extent of transfer credits accepted by degree level, active duty and veteran assistance services and support, and the support provided to the families of service members, among others.

On average, Coastline Military Programs serves around

Coastline Military Programs graduation 2013

3,000 unique students each term and offers programs and courses that lead to a degree or certificate in a variety of fields. Students can complete their coursework without ever setting foot on a Coastline campus. The college also offers programs to military veterans and spouses.

For more information, visit <http://military.coastline.edu>.

New program links Coastline students to bachelor degrees at Penn State, U of Illinois Springfield, and UMass Coastline Community College and the University of Illinois Springfield (UIS) have partnered under the Learning 1st initiative to launch an online pathway that allows students to simultaneously earn an Associate of Science (A.S.) in Science and Math degree and a Bachelor of Science (B.S.) in Computer Science degree without ever leaving their home state.

Learning 1st is a collaborative effort between the League for Innovation in the Community College, Coastline Community College, and three major universities supporting the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation’s Postsecondary Success Strategy. In addition to collaborative pathway programs with UIS, Coastline will be launching similar programs with the University of Massachusetts Amherst and Pennsylvania State University in 2014.

Through the Coastline-UIS program, students earn their undergraduate units at Coastline Community College either on-site at one of Coastline’s three O.C. campuses, or online via distance learning. Upper division (major) units are completed online through the University of Illinois Springfield at special, locked-in online tuition rates which are frozen throughout the program—ensuring tuition stability for the student as they pursue their Bachelors.

Program benefits include a single program application and no application fee—a benefit that Program Coordinator Jason Ward says is very unique. “Most four-year universities charge between $50 and $100 just to apply to the institution,” said Ward. “In this unique program, you are admitted and considered a student of UIS from day one, even while you’re working on your lower division units at Coastline,” he added.

As part of the UIS program, upon meeting both Coastline and UIS degree and transfer requirements, students are guaranteed enrollment in the upper division classes they need each semester to complete the program. In addition, students are assigned a dedicated program adviser from Coastline and one from UIS that will guide them through the program and towards both degrees.

“...students are guaranteed enrollment in the upper division classes they need each semester...”

The goal of the Learning 1st grant was to create a consortium to enhance the ability of community colleges to provide online baccalaureate degree completion pathways for low-income and working adults. While the UIS program, launching now, provides students with a pathway to a Bachelor of Science in Computer Science, future programs with the University of Massachusetts Amherst and Pennsylvania State University will provide online pathways to Bachelor of Business Administration and Bachelor of Psychology degrees.

For further information on the program or to sign up for courses starting October 21, visit www.Learning1st.org, e-mail Learning1st@coastline.edu, or call (714) 241-6323.
